In our Good Learning Book this week:

A huge 'well done' to all children in school this week for showing great resilience through this very uncertain time.

Message from the Head

We find ourselves in very strange times currently and this looks to be the last newsletter that I will write for a while. Not something that I thought I would be thinking about in March.

I am sure you and your children are feeling apprehensive about what the next few weeks and months will bring. Such a huge and unknown shift in everyone's daily and weekly routine can't help but induce some worry. I know I am concerned about keeping my own children learning and entertained at home and I am a teacher! We all need and want some structure in our lives, and you will each find your own way for your family with this. We will miss the things that are restricted and we are no longer able to do for the duration of the crisis. (I secretly hope that it will mean every child loves school on their return!). But I think at all times it is important to also see the opportunity and positives. In 1665 when the Black Death was ravishing the country, Isaac Newton was sent home to work as Cambridge University shut its doors to students. It was during this time that he 'discovered' his theory about gravity, formulated calculus and postulated various theories about optics. That was most definitely not wasted time! So this is a time for you to explore learning in different ways with your children, enjoy more time spent together as a family and make memories that will last you all a lifetime.

Although our doors will be shut, we will not be closed. We will continue to stay in touch with you, direct your child's learning, and be available to help and support you in any way we can. I wish you, your family and loved ones all the very best and hope that you stay happy and healthy until normal service resumes.
